

Compound adjectives – to hyphenate or not to hyphenate

The table provides some general guidelines for when to include a hyphen in compound adjectives of different types. The most important 'rule' is to be consistent.

| Туре   | Rule   | Examples   | Exceptions   |
|--|--|--|--|
| adjective + adjective  | Hyphenate whether before or after the noun                                   | red-hot surfacethe surface is red-hot  |  |
| noun + noun  | Hyphenate beforethe noun   | student-nurse accommodation  | Use of set phrases as adjectives, unless ahyphen is needed to prevent ambiguity:tax office rulingretrospective tax-office ruling               |
| adjective + noun   | Hyphenate before but notafter the noun                                   | long-term planswe made plans for the long term   | Use of set phrases as adjectives:equal opportunity employerhigh school teachersea surface temperature  |
| noun + adjective   | Hyphenate whether beforeor after the noun                                | HIV-positive manHe is HIV-positivedisease-free fruitthe fruit are disease-free         |  |
| adjective + participle   | Hyphenate before but not after the noun                                      | open-ended questionthe question was open ended   |  |
| noun + participle  | Hyphenate before but notafter the noun                                   | a government-owned facilitythe facility is government owned                                    | Some well-established compounds (set asa single word):lifesavingwidespread   |
| adverb ending in ly + participle or adjective           | Leave open whether before or after the noun                                  | a mildly amusing personhe is mildly amusing  |  |
| adverb not endingin ly + participle oradjective | Hyphenate before but notafter the noun                                   | a well-fed animalthe animal was well fedfast-moving trafficthe traffic was fast moving | When the adverb rather than thecompound as a whole is modified byanother adverb (entire expression is open):a very much needed addition |
| noun + gerund  | Hyphenate adjective formbefore the noun; usuallyleave noun form open | involved in decision makingdecision-making body  | Some well-established compounds (set asa single word):caregivingcopyediting  |
| adjectival or adverbialphrase                              | Hyphenate before thenoun; usually leave openafter the noun           | an over-the-counter drugsold over the counter  |  |

Compound adjectives – to hyphenate or not to hyphenate | page 1 of 2

Australian manual of style is published by 02 6282 2280

amos@stylemanual.com.au

| Туре   | Rule  | Examples   | Exceptions |
|--|---|--|------------|
| foreign phrases usedadjectivally   | Leave open unless hyphensare used in the originallanguage | an a priori argumentin vitro fertilisation   |            |
| ordinal number +superlative  | Hyphenate before but not after the noun                           | the third-largest citythe city is the third largest inAustralia                    |            |
| chemical terms   | Leave open in both noun and adjective forms                       | sodium chloridea sodium chloride solution  |            |
| age terms  | Hyphenate in both nounand adjective forms                     | a 3-year-olda 5-year-old childbutshe was 5 years old                           |            |
| compounds containingcapital letters,quotation marks orother changes intypography | Leave open  | a High Court rulinga 'make or break' decisiona type A executivetype 2 diabetes |            |

Compound adjectives – to hyphenate or not to hyphenate | page 2 of 2

Australian manual of style is published by

amos@stylemanual.com.au 02 6282 2280

© 2022 Biotext Pty Ltd